Sen. Lucas Hears From Mokena After Anti War Meeting

A full house listened intently last Friday night in the Hatch hall in Mokena to a highly illuminating and interesting dissection of the controversial lend-lease bill as given by Miss Betty Browning, well known Chicago newspaper woman.

The meeting had been called by the Frankfort Republican Woman's club and was in charge of Mrs. Wm. Semmler as chairman. A community sing preceded the opening of the discussion.

Miss Browning in a most comprehensive manner showed why the lend-lease bill is a dictator bill by giving the President unlimited power, more than the laws of the land at present grant him. She also pointed out the clever intrigues of foreign nations used to inveigle the United States to become a belligerent and then foot the bill.

Miss Browning dwelt at length from personal observation and first hand information on the war hysteria which is rampant on the Atlantic sea coast. People there are actually so befuddled by the war propaganda that they are momentarily expecting to see Hitler's air planes dropping bombs on New York City and people in Boston are actually looking for periscopes of Hitler's submarines to show up in the Atlantic. The speaker cited other fantastic ideas indulged in by the war hysteria victims. She further pointed out that reason such a large portion of the east is for war is due to the intermarriage of the snobs of society with the aristocratic families of England.

Miss Browning made it very clear to her attentive audience that the propaganda of Hitler invading this country is pure unadulterated poppycock. She showed that this nation is impregnable from any outside foe with two oceans serving as the mightiest barrier which no aggressor nation can successfully overcome.

A highly interesting point brought out was that many of the American people have not read nor know what the lend-lease bill is, and yet they are for it.

Another fact brought out was that England was in favor of the South during the Civil War and the Southern politicians have always been friendly toward England.

More friendly relationships with the South American Republics was advocated, also that English possessions in this hemisphere should be turned over to the United States as collateral for credits desired. It was also pointed out that England never paid interest or principal on the billions loaned to her during the first World War and that an English statesman had declared at the close of the war that if America had minded her own business and had not entered the war, England would have signed a peace agreement in 1917 and Communism, Fascism and Nazism would not have come into being.

The speaker declared that Senators and Representatives do pay much attention to the opinions of the folks back home and that every one opposed to the passage of the lend-lease bill should write to their Congressman and Senators urging the defeat of the bill. Senator Scott Lucas was said to be a wobbling senator and that if plenty of pressure were exerted on him he might change his attitude favoring the bill.

At the close of the meeting regular post cards were handed out to the audience and the people were asked to register their opposition on the cards and mail them to Senator Lucas.

The response to this request was very gratifying and many postal cards were mailed to the senator asking him to change his attitude on the bill.

Copies of the lend-lease bill were passed out to every one in the audience.

Miss Browning made a quite definite impression against the bill and her pleasing, straight-forward manner of handling the subject was much appreciated.

REFUGEE TELLS OF HOLLAND INVASION TERROR

Outstanding in the history of the Frankfort Women's Club, was the Dutch Tea which they gave in the school auditorium recently, with 100 members and guests present.

After a pleasing program during which Mrs. Wesley Hollstein sang, "The Pilot", and "Love's Garden of Roses", accompanied at the piano by Mr. Glenn Voss. Mrs. Leonard Jacobs, of Joliet, a refugee from Amsterdam, Holland was presented. She spoke of her native country which is 100 miles wide, 200 miles long.

Mrs. Jacobs, said the Government of Holland because of war countries, made plans 3 years ago for systematic protection. As the homes in Holland are built of one unit covering one block, one man, called an air warden, was assigned to a block, whose duties were to know how many people resided in the block, where gas, water and sewer pipes were located, so that in event of an air raid he would know just what to do. Mr. Jacobs was in charge of the block in which their home was located.

The socialist party had been active in Holland for the past 50 years. There were also Dutch Fascists who were supported, the speaker said, by German money. The political groups other than the Dutch government, were spreading the doctrine of hate and the speaker declared "when people hate, sense goes out."

It was a Thursday night in June when the sky was blackened with German planes, from which were dropped parachutes to which soldiers and rubber boats were attached. The Germans were looking for the Dutch airport and the keeper who had been instructed to keep the air port in darkness, instead turned on the lights, thus making the landing of the German planes easy. The airport keeper turned out to be a Dutch Fascist unbeknown to his countrymen.

The bombing of Amsterdam was terrific. Next the German planes aimed for The Hague. The faithful Dutch soon learned that their queen had left with their government for England.

Europe's largest waterway locks are located in Holland. Hearing that a large important bridge was to be blown up by the Germans, the people were encouraged with the report that a French train was coming to prevent this plot, but when the train arrived it was filled with German soldiers. Seeing that the invading horde aided by Dutch Fascists had won over the few resisting Hollanders Mr. Jacobs told his wife it was time to flee.

The family consisting of a two year old daughter, a 2 weeks old baby, Mr. Jacobs father, 70 and his mother, 62; the brother and his family quickly gathering whatever clothes they could together with canned milk and a bottle of boric acid, left everything else and drove 18 miles in their car to the harbor. At first it was hard to find, but when the Dutch fired the gasoline storage tanks the blaze enabled them to see the harbor in which 4 small boats were anchored. Seeking to escape in the boats, the refugee family became divided, and got into two different boats, the last one carrying 90 persons. The boats set out for England and were attacked by German planes in the open sea. In addition to this the boats had to go through a mine field in which mines were floating 9 feet beneath the surface of the water.

As there was no food or drink on the boats, Mrs. Jacobs finally drank the bottle of boric acid water to quench her thirst.

In the early hours of Wednesday morning they arrived at Dover. The English told them not to land as the harbor was infested with mines. They proceeded to Poole, England which was reached 24 hours after leaving Dover.

They were overjoyed to land and a most welcome sight was a troop of Boy Scouts who met them. The Scouts served tomato soup to the refugees and Mrs. Jacobs said the soup was so good that she drank 18 cups of it.

After landing in England the refugees were kept in camp for several days for questioning, so the authorities could ascertain whether they were genuine refugees or spies. They finally reached London. They had decided to go to the Dutch East or West Indies, but told no safe passage could be assured.

Mr. Jacobs having been a student at the American Institute of Laundry in Joliet in 1932, decided to come to Joliet. Ten weeks elapsed before the family secured their visas and on June 22, 1940 they left Liverpool. They were delayed in the harbor for 2 days due to air raids and other unsafe conditions.

Just before sailing the Jacobs family witnessed an air raid on London and they with 450 other persons

Girl Hurt In Auto Crash

Miss Geraldine Discombe, 18 years old of Sterling, Ill., suffered serious injuries Monday night when the automobile in which she was riding crashed into a parked car on the Lincoln highway a mile west of New Lenox.

According to Dr. Jeanette Holt of New Lenox who treated the young woman, said the automobile struck another car which had stopped on the pavement while Otto Bormet of New Lenox was pulling a car out of the ditch into which it had skidded during the heavy snow.

When Miss Discombe was taken to the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet examination revealed her injuries included possible concussion of the brain and possible fracture of several ribs.

Miss Discombe was returning to Sterling from Springfield, Ohio.

took to an air raid shelter.

They landed in New York August 15th, 1940 and came to Joliet. Now Mrs. Jacobs says she is most happy, having received her first citizenship papers. They are glad to make this country their future home where there are no air raids, where they have plenty to eat and can sleep in peace.

Mokena Red Cross Is Very Active

The Mokena Red Cross Volunteer workers are quite happy with their work. Since Jan. 27 to the end of February they have made over 3000 surgical dressings and a large amount of home sewing has been done.

There is a great need for knitters to knit socks and make children's suits. Anyone who can spare a little time is asked to come to the center Monday or Tuesday afternoons and help with this work.

Mrs. Henry Stellwagen is the first one of this group to earn a volunteer pin, she having completed 35 hours of work. Eighteen hours of work gives to a volunteer the pin. Altogether the group has put in 244 hours of work.

There is a great need for small pieces of yarn, so if there is an old worn out sweater, etc., in your home which can be washed, bring or send it in and the yarn will be knitted into small squares to make afghans for the soldiers.

Editorial

A great groundswell is rising all over the United States against the dictator bill which is threatening to make his land of the free, the land of the slaves, just like Europe and a very good indication of how the mass of the people feel on this great issue was reflected in a judicial election held in south central Illinois the past week in which June C. Smith, was elected Republican Judge to the Illinois Supreme Court by a great avalanche of votes over his Democratic opponent Judge Dove, and this in a judicial district which has always voted Democratic since the days of Stephen A. Douglas.

The Democrat only carried one county out of the 21 counties in the judicial district, which shows conclusively that the expression of the people about the Administration's foreign policy, which is leading us to war, is rapidly assuming concrete form.

This one election indicates what is in store for the war mongering politicians in Washington when they attempt to seek re-election. During the last political campaign the Democratic party was branded as a war party and events since the November 5th election have proven this charge to be correct.

The voters are beginning to repay the politicians leading us to war in the best currency they have—their votes.

No candidate for the House of Representatives or the Senate who ran on a platform of non-intervention in Europe's war was defeated. All who were sent to Washington promised to vote to keep America out of the European war.

Watch your next local election returns and see the southern Illinois incident repeated.

The time is coming when the people will rise against both major parties and create a new American party which will truly represent American principles as both present major parties did when they were young and before their candidates started to sell out the voters as was done by Wendell Wilkie in the last election.

New Lenox Ten Pin Chatter

Yes sir folks I was there. Where? Why down to those swell Bowling Alleys that "Wish" Walsh built in New Lenox for the "Boys and Girls" and I want to say here that he sure put on the old Irish style and did one swell job. His place is certainly something to be proud of and the bowlers all wish him success.

As most of you know the New Lenox Men's League started a short season last Monday night with two shifts of 6 teams each starting at 7:30 and 9:30 p. m. I was not able to stay until the finish but I did see all of the kegelers perform. Before I report, would like to mention to the new bowlers in our gang that this is all in fun and if your name is mentioned here we hope you will not be offended.

You should have seen some of the boys wear that new paint off the gutters. But of course the old timers do that too. Some of the boys did not know what the foul line was for.

Joe Bruns masterful manipulation of the foul lights soon taught them however to their chagrin and sorrow. That's right Joe they may as well learn right away that fouling does considerable damage to their scores. I overheard Judge Pease say that he was afraid to bowl any of the New Lenox boys after hearing them talk, but after looking at the score sheets Monday night he is willing to take any or all of them on despite the fact he hasn't bowled in over 20 years. How's about that fellows? Watch this paper next week for some personalities. TEN PIN

SLATED FOR HIGHWAY MAINTENANCE JOBS

Conrad Sangmeister of Frankfort has been slated for the job of state highway truck driver and maintenance man with Herman Schweser, Mokena as assistant.

Within five days after celebrating their golden wedding celebration observed last Wednesday, sorrow entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. C. Hollstein in Tinley Park, when Mrs. Hollstein died Tuesday afternoon. She had been in poor health for sometime, but was quite cheerful and greatly enjoyed the observance of her golden wedding day.

Mrs. Hollstein nee Lena Beckman was united in marriage with Wm. C. Hollstein in the Green Garden Evangelical church Feb. 26, 1891. They located in Tinley Park 15 years after retiring from the farm. Surviving are the husband, one son Cleveland, one daughter Lena and two grand children.

Funeral services will be held this Friday afternoon from the late home at 1:30 p. m., and at the Tinley Park Methodist church at 2 p. m., with burial in the Methodist cemetery. Rev. L. E. Weinreich will officiate.

The deceased attained the age of 74 years, 8 months and 3 days.

Hundreds Attend Frankfort Lions Club Charter Night

Over 200 members and guests attended the Charter Night of the new Frankfort Lions Club held Tuesday night in the parlors of the St. Peter's Evangelical and Reformed church in Frankfort.

Henry Breidert served as chairman of the Charter Night program, which opened with the song "America" sung by the entire assembly.

The invocation was offered by the Rev. G. Gerhold, pastor of the St. Peter's church.

The banquet followed. During the dinner a musical and song program was carried out.

The Joliet Lions club was the sponsoring club and Mr. Hayes of this club kept the crowd in merry mood with his knack of assessing special "fines" and Judge J. C. Knight was himself "fined", and proved equal to the occasion with his quick repartee.

Arthur Lambrecht, Frankfort's own popular MC, served as master of ceremonies and did a very fine job. Attorney Albert Krusemark, Sr., gave an address of welcome to which President Fred Prehn of the Joliet Lions Club responded in a most appropriate manner.

Community singing added to the fine spirit of fellowship which prevailed. Bryan B. Blalock, Lions organizer who had been scheduled to be on the program, was unable to attend.

Attorney Frank Brumund of Joliet, District Gov. IB delivered the charter presentation address setting forth the growth of Lionism and all it stands for. He also high lighted his speech with some local history.

The charter acceptance address was made by Albert H. Krusemark, Jr., President of the Frankfort Lions club.

An entertainment program followed with a violin solo by Jeanette Heisner, a solo by Marion Sequin of Oak Lawn, an accordion solo by Uddell Gay of Frankfort.

J. F. Skinner of the Joliet Township mystified the audience with his stunts of magic.

The program closed with a Lions song and the benediction by Rev. R. Malek of the Frankfort Methodist church.

The speakers table was decorated with American flags and candles.

Among the out of town guests were Circuit Court Clerk Paul Wunder and County Recorder Spritzer and County Auditor Herman Grassle all of Joliet. Mayor George Sangmeister extended a hearty welcome. Crete and Gardner Lions Clubs were well represented.

Women Play Important Roles in Wars Fought Throughout Centuries of Conflict

By ROGER SHAW

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NEW YORK.—A well-known British historical novelist once remarked to me: "The greatest companionate marriage in world history is that of Venus with Mars." The more you think about it, from any old aspect, the truer it seems to be. Kipling added to this something about the female being deadlier than the male, and there's also the old slogan about the hand that rocks the cradle rules the home, and the home-defense program to boot. All this sounds rather anti-sentimental, but this is meant to be a factual piece, and not one gushing with the Whistler and his Mother spirit.

As a matter of fact, the war functions of women go back a long ways. They date all the way to the mythical amazons of ancient Greece, who were war-women with a kick and a vengeance.

In the Middle ages, lovely ladies often directed the defense of feudal castles, locked into chastity belts of cold, hard iron, while their mailed husbands were off at the crusades. Some of these medieval amazons were very effective in siege warfare, and at times they even wore armor. One rule was always observed in this type of fighting. The lady went with the castle, if she were attractive. So much for medieval chivalry, which was more realistic than Sir Walter Scott is always ready to admit.

Joan of Arc.

Then there was the mad maid of Orleans; that German maedchen from Lorraine known to some as Joan of Arc. Here was a woman at war; a regular feline field-marshal of the first water. She gave the English their worst defeats until the battle of Dunkirk in 1940, which is saying a good deal in anybody's language. Joan was such a good war woman that the English said she was a witch, and burned her as such. As a matter of fact, Joan must have given them a terrible inferiority complex, for when she entered the picture, the French and English had been battling for a century, and the Hundred Years' war was drawing to a disastrous close.

In the Russian revolution there emerged the Women's Battalion of Death, which got even more press-agenting than the U. S. marines, and that's saying an awful lot right from the horse's mouth. This was a Kerensky unit, and it was commanded by a brainy, grim-visaged 1917 amazonian who always carried poison tablets in case she were captured.

Some Actual Fighting.

The w. b. of d. really did some fighting, against the Bolsheviks and the Germans both. They carried the extra-long Russian rifles, with extra-long bayonets which could not be removed from the rifle barrels, and which stood taller than some of the w. b. of d. ladies. Finally, Kerensky ran away, and the Kerensky following dispersed.

In the Spanish civil war, up in the northerly Basque country, the big bounding Basque country girls fought side by side with their men folks. They pushed Italians over cliffs, and vicariously kicked them in the pants. La Passionaria was a famous Spanish Communist fighter, and she raised hades up and down the Spanish peninsula, for years on Women are playing vital roles as noncombatants in England today. Somewhere in England the young lady above (left) covers plane fuselages with fabric on an airplane assembly line. end. Everybody was afraid of her, including the Spanish Loyalist government which she was supposed to be serving, in her own sweet rubicund way. After the end of the civil war, this Passion Flower fled over the border to France.

In the first World war, women went to work in the British and German ammunition factories with a vim and a vengeance. They liked it. It meant female emancipation, higher wages by far, and plenty of wartime glamour, lure, and sex appeal. They worked hard and efficiently, and they had the time of their lives. There were feeble echoes of this in America, but nowhere near the high-pressure goings-on as in the lands of those ill-assorted first cousins, the king and kaiser.

Again, Mars and Venus.

In 1940, June, France collapsed, and the defense program came to the United States. Again it was women and war; Mars and Venus; hearts and swords. When it came to forging the swords, or co-operating with them in other ways, the hearts came in with a vengeance. By the middle of 1941, for instance, some million and a half men will be in training camps. Some six million more people will be needed in offices and industrial plants, to back them up in the speedup of the defense and help-England programs. That six million, required, is where the women come into the present picture, and in large numbers, too. Women are good for any factory process except heavy lifting, or similar strong-arm stuff. In some munitions lines, like special fuse making, the finicky female fingers out-maneuver the mere male.

In Philadelphia it's fuses; but in Detroit it's automobiles. Some Detroit women have been working in auto factories for a quarter of a century, and like it. You find them in all departments: ignition wiring, piston inspecting, soldering things together, body trimming, working a 40-hour week with decent social safeguards. They can't work unless they are 18, and that's enforced rigidly under the stringent Michigan laws, and most of them marry, have children, and lead a home-life.

These auto workers, or motorettes, so-called, could and can be easily converted into airplane conditioners and girl-groundhogs. They paint plane wings, inspect mechanical details and check deficiencies, clean up, and etch identification numbers in the aircraft works from dawn till dusk. They toil at gun-making, and stick the caps on shells, and fuss efficiently with machine-tools, which have now become the veritable sinews of modern warfare. So it goes. In America we always employ close to two million women in industries, and that figure is going up, up, and up.

While some women play an active role in England's defense, this mother's work is even more important. Life must go on, war or no war.

Canadian 'Speed-Up.'

Canada has already speeded up its gals, or perhaps the gals have speeded up the land of the maple leaf. Factories and shipyards are on the make in the previously under-industrialized dominion, for England must be served and supplied. All Canadians and Canadiennes over 16, have been registered by the Ottawa government, and the airplane and munitions works are getting rapidly feminized. There are even girlish armament engineers, and so on down the gamut. In Canada the women work 44 hours per week, as against the Yankee 40, but they don't work nearly as hard. They have more fun at it, and it is more human and less on the soulless robot pattern.

The American women take to overalls and old clothes, while the Canadiennes toil in the get-up of our own mid-western college coeds. They munch on candy, sport the old high heels, and kid their male shop bosses, if any. They're not as well protected as the Yankees and they're paid somewhat less, but there's the other side to the coin—that of the lighter heart and the wiser crack. This attitude, too, is reflected in the Canadian male conscription. It's only for a month, as against the grimmer year (a minimum) of the American draft system. When it comes to Canadian military wives, they get $20 per month from the husband's pay, and another $35 from the government. There is another monthly $12 each for children. A Canadian private soldier gets $1.30 per day, which is very good military money—in fact, the world's top for doughboys.

Then, up in Canada, there are all sorts of women's volunteer groups, for washing sailors' laundry (Hali-fax), button-sewing-onning (Toronto), work in the Salvation Army, the Y. W. C. A., running military saloons called canteens, dancing with the boys, and marrying them off. They also drive trucks, roll Red Cross materials, collect books and magazines for the camps and campers, and collect blood for transfusions.

Professional Nurses.

Trained nursing is a completely professional job up north of us. Nurses are in the army with the rank and pay of "lieutenants," and there are actually some 14,000 of them—four units being overseas in the snappiest of all the current snappy war uniforms. These are public healthers, diet gals, hospital experts and so-called physiotherapists, plus some free-lances and glamourites. They like it, and are liked. In England they are super-popular and have the time of their lives, so they write home to Winnipeg, or Three Rivers, or Guelph.

In the new American conscript army the women will also take a hand, or hands. Each new camp is to have a librarian and three hostesses, and the local clubwomen sponsor weekly dances and other such goings-on. In some communities, "nice" girls are not supposed to step out with private soldiers, especially in the conservative South. A fair ratio, in the camps, is 50 girls to 250 men when it comes to dancing and such festivals.

By the middle of this year, some 4,000 Red Cross nurses will be called up for the U. S. army, to supplement the hundreds of female "regulars." Army nursing will be multiplied by five, and navy nursing by something like four. They'll all be under 35 years old, and preferably attractive, although that fact isn't advertised. Then, there are the military and naval secretaries, typists, clericals, etc., who throng Washington, and type their country's battles at a snappy clip. These were the naval yeomanettes of 1917-18. And that's only the beginning.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Reviewed by CARTER FIELD

Willkie 'out of step' with party, but apparently takes wiser course . . . Predict more government ownership of electrical industry.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—"I'll bet they are awful mad with me," Wendell L. Willkie remarked to a personal friend after testifying before the senate foreign relations committee and conferring with President Roosevelt on the Lease-Lend bill.

He was talking about the Republican leaders in congress. He was absolutely right. They are, and have been for some time.

But the question is: Have they the right to be? Certainly Willkie never concealed his attitude about helping Britain during the recent political battles.

It is a fact that Willkie is out of step with the men who will probably decide who is to be the next chairman of the Republican National committee. It is obviously a fact that he is out of sympathy with a majority of the Republicans in both house and senate.

But neither of these facts is of any great moment NOW. It may be tremendously significant by 1944, or it may not.

CONSIDER POSSIBILITIES

Consider the possibilities. First, let's take the one that Britain may go down in the meantime. It is extremely likely that a vast majority of the people of this country will be distressed by the fact—will wish that it could have been averted. People feeling that way will be apt, it would seem, to be bitter against the political leaders who tried to prevent the largest measure of aid possible to Britain.

Or suppose that Britain is still fighting in 1944. Most people in Washington believe that if the war lasts that long we will be in it, and on the side of Britain. If that is so, it would not seem likely that to have opposed aid to Britain in 1940 and 1941 would be a healthy position for any candidate to occupy.

Or suppose there is peace by 1944. That will involve entirely the sort of peace it is—as to what public sentiment about the whole situation will be in this country. But if history is any guide, more people will be displeased than pleased by the peace terms.

But in order to imagine a situation in which public sentiment would turn strongly to the men who opposed aid to Britain it is virtually necessary for there to have been a revolution of sentiment here against Britain as a result of some development concerning the ending of the war or the peace terms. It seems a bit thick, with the betting odds heavily favoring the Roosevelt-Willkie position being more popular than that taken by Sen. Burton K. Wheeler and Republican House Leader Joe Martin.

Predict More Public Ownership of Electricity

A very shrewd observer in the electrical industry predicts that within the next few years the proportion of government-owned systems will reach 40 per cent of the total. Actually this view is regarded by most disinterested observers as very conservative indeed. There are those who expect the next few decades to witness the disappearance of the privately owned electric utility.

Some critics say that the government is rather slow in recognizing a fact capable of demonstration—that steam is cheaper than water power in many instances, though lacking in its appeal to the popular imagination. Political platforms and political oratory have made much of the public right to the natural blessing of falling water.

But the tendency is significant. So far most of this turning to steam is "incidental"—not a happy word to the last ditch opponents of government ownership, since it was "incidental power," almost unavoidable in a dam project designed for navigation and flood control, which steered the TVA safely past the Supreme court.

Steam generation is "incidental" for the next little period in this march of government ownership because it is being projected almost exclusively in areas where it is to supplement hydroelectric power.

But the day is in sight when government steam plants will not be merely supplemental to existing hydro projects.

So long as the battle was waged on hydro power almost exclusively, the government had enormous advantages. It could charge off a big fraction of the first cost of the dam and reservoir—the main elements of cost in any hydro project being interest on the investment—to flood control and navigation. Then, with government bonds, it could borrow the money more cheaply. Finally it escaped a large fraction, at least, of the federal and local tax burdens of its private competitor. With steam, the battle is more nearly even, though the borrowing and tax advantages still lie with the government.

Good Posture Help to Both Body and Mind

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

I SPEAK often about good posture—erect position of the body whether standing or sitting—because of its value both physical and mental.

The erect carriage of the body means that the shoulders are well back and the chest well forward, giving the lungs plenty of room to expand, and preventing any crowding or pressure on the heart. With the lungs drawing in the pure air and, what is more important breathing out the impure air, the blood, pumped by a heart free from pressure, will carry more nourishment to and more wastes from every cell in the body.

The erect position calls also for a drawing in (or backwards) of the abdomen and the development of the abdominal muscles by keeping the abdomen drawn in or back holds the abdominal organs up in their proper positions, thus aiding digestion and preventing constipation.

Dr. Philip Lewin, New York, in Clinical Medicine and Surgery, gives 10 commandments of good posture.

1. Stand tall.
2. Sit tall.
3. Walk tall and "chesty," with weight of the body on the balls or front part of the feet.
4. Draw in the abdomen, pulling it backwards and upwards.
5. Keep the shoulders high and square.
6. Pull the chin downward toward the collar button.
7. Flatten the hollow of the back by rolling the hip bones downward and backward.
8. Separate the shoulders from the hips as far as possible. Do this more by drawing hips down than by raising shoulders.
9. Lie tall and flat. (Don't overdo this as having elbows and knees very slightly bent helps to relax the body and so invites sleep).
10. Think tall.

What's to Be Done About Dandruff?

PERHAPS you have been reading about various cures for dandruff or have tried some without obtaining a cure. That dandruff is a forerunner or cause of loss of hair is not true, according to many research workers.

The federal trade commission of the United States, after an investigation of dandruff, states that there is no proof that dandruff is due to any infection. In Public Health Reports, Washington, D. C., Dr. C. W. Emmons states that while a small yeastlike organism is always present in the dry or greasy scales of dandruff.

This little organism is known as the "bottle bacillus" and many investigators have tried in vain to cause it to grow as other tiny organisms are made to grow. Even those research workers who have been successful in growing this organism admit that they have not been able to cause dandruff in any scalps by inoculation with it.

Instead of trying to infect a normal scalp and thus perhaps cause dandruff, it was decided to inoculate an individual who already had dandruff and to measure whether this inoculation caused any increase in the time required to develop dandruff in places where dandruff was extensive as compared with places in which dandruff was absent or scant. The dandruff did not appear any sooner in the inoculated spots than in the other spots.

This proves, that, with our present knowledge at least, dandruff is not likely due to the organism that hitherto has been blamed for it.

The above information does not mean that something should not be done about dandruff. Until the cause is found, the frequent use of soap and water on the scalp, or the use of various proprietary preparations should be continued. The cleansing and rubbing of the scalp in itself is helpful in that it not only loosens and removes scales but stimulates the circulation of the blood in the scalp.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Could heavy smoking (now discontinued) have any direct connection with my feeling sure I have heart disease?

A.—It is not likely that your heart was permanently damaged by smoking. Symptoms look more like gall bladder disturbance. However, an examination by your physician will show whether or not symptoms are due to a heart condition.

Q.—How can I stop smoking?
A.—Eating candy before smoking and engaging in sports will help.

Birth Rate in U. S. During 1940 Highest in Ten Years
WASHINGTON.—Approximately 2,350,000 babies were born in the United States in 1940, the highest number recorded in any one year since 1930, according to preliminary figures released by Vergil D. Reed, acting director of the census.

The 1940 total was nearly 100,000 greater than in 1939 and the increase lifted the national birth rate from 17.3 to 18 live births per 1,000 population. Census bureau officials emphasized, however, that this increase in the birth rate had no long-range implications. From a rate of 24.2 in 1921, the rate has continuously declined to its lowest point—16.5—in 1933. Since then it has risen irregularly. The long-range tendency is still downward, explains the census bureau, the present rise resulting from the fact that babies born from the greatly increased volume of marriages following the first World war are now coming into reproductive ages.

"I'll have to scour the windshield," Wills said. "I can't see through it."

Air that cut their faces rushed in as he opened the door. Marian thought of old Tom—the thin, torn old coat he had worn in the jail, his feet sloshing through the freezing mud, wind cutting through mercilessly.

"Oh—hurry!" she whispered. "But—Mother, what if he didn't come this way?"

"He came this way. He took the old log trail across the ridge, and crossed the river on that swinging bridge."

"There's a light," said Branford Wills.

"The gate is beyond that big tree. It's steep beyond—you'd better change gears."

"Has he had time—"

"He left before dark. A boy saw him go. They didn't miss him till supper time—"

"If only they had locked the door," Marian mourned.

"We may be in time," Virgie was hopeful.

The house that sprang out of a gnarled darkness of old apple-trees was bleak and somber and somehow desolate.

"The door's open—" breathed Marian.

Virgie gave a little groan.

"I'll go," she said. "You wait here."

"Not alone, Mother."

"No—not alone," Wills sprang out after her.

Marian hurried after them, slipping and panting, in the wan beam of their headlights. But somehow she knew it was too late. She had known it when the dreary old house leaped out of the darkness, out of the solitude and silence which for a year it had known.

"Don't let her come," Virgie warned sharply.

"But I'm coming," Marian answered, setting the chin she had from David Morgan.

"Take my hand," Wills said.

"I can walk alone." But she took the hand.

Held it tight, clutched by the dread of that sinister, opened door. Beyond that door a lamp fluttered in the draft. Beyond it was a deserted room, where coals glowed in a base burner and Wallace Withers' elastic-sided shoes sat warming on the floor. Shoes he would never wear any more.

"Don't come closer," Virgie called sharply.

But Wills went on and Marian would not let go his hand, though her flesh was icy and her hair lifted a little on her head, at what lay there, face upward in front of that open door.

Wallace Withers had been shot cleanly through the head.

This time Tom's gun had not jammed.

"Don't touch anything," Wills warned. "Is there a telephone in this house?"

Virgie, a little sick because she could not hate even a dead, cruel old man who had wronged her, shook her head.

"Not even a well," she said.

"But—we've got to find Tom!" Marian began sobbing wildly.

"Take care of her," Virgie said to Wills wearily. "I'll get a sheet. I know where they are. I can't leave him lying there—like that."

She had heard Marian's little choking cry, "Oh, Bran—Bran—"

She had seen Wills holding her in his arms. Suddenly she was old and lonely, and this was death lying face up to the hostile sky—and out of the aloof hills a winter wind howled in desolation. Suddenly she was sorry for Wallace Withers. He had been lonely, too!

They found Tom Pruitt at dawn. Men with lanterns and dogs had crashed and slid through the icy night, cursing the storm and the darkness. And all night Virgie had sat by the stove in Wallace Withers' house, looking straight ahead of her, musing on the tangled tragedy of life—and the way greed snarled the twisting strands, wove traps and nooses and webs for hopes and high ambitions to be choked in.

Wills and Marian had gone for help and met a posse on the road. But light was under the hemlocks along the river bluff when they found Tom.

Virgie saw them coming, slowly, up the frozen lane, and knew what they had found.

"He went over them rocks—down there where the river runs under the cliff," a deputy said. "He was heading back toward your place I reckon, Mis' Morgan, and he missed his footing in the dark. I wouldn't take on, Mis' Morgan—I reckon it's just as well."

"Yes," said Virgie, tonelessly, "it's just as well."

Somehow she got home.

Riding in somebody's rickety car, cold and weary and aching from head to foot with a sorrow that was rigid and steely like bonds around her heart and throat.

The mountains and the woods were frigidly incased in a coating of icy glass. The streams were hidden and from the stack of the mill a wan steam drifted.

The fires were banked and tomorrow the barkers would whirl again, gnashing their steel teeth into unresisting wood, grinding and spewing and sucking away the life-blood of a green tree so that missals could be printed for praying nuns and letters written to old mothers.

The mill would go on.

The mill would go on and Tom would not be there. David would not be there. A sudden, stark, awful loneliness got Virgie Morgan by the throat as she walked into her own house, and sank into the chair that had the print of David Morgan's thin shoulder-blades.

She couldn't go on—she couldn't—alone!

And then suddenly she was not alone. Youth was there, with lights and hot coffee and gentle hands.

Marian and Branford Wills. "We've stopped fighting, Mother—we found out we were terribly in love with each other. Do you mind, Mother? Take off her shoes, Bran, and rub her feet. I'll get her slippers."

Branford Wills knelt at her feet, lean and brown, with his deep voice and gentle eyes.

"I can't go on without her," he said. "I know what a presumptuous fool I am—"

"I'm glad," said Virgie numbly. She would have liked a son like this lad, she was thinking.

Lucy was there—and Stanley Daniels, looking sheepish and relieved and eager to help. They were scrambling eggs, they announced.

"We thought you'd need us, Mrs. Morgan," Lucy said, brightly, little red coins shining in her cheeks.

Suddenly Virgie began to sob.

They were so brave and so reckless and so gallant. Their eyes were so clear. They were youth—going on!

"Yes, I need you!" she said hoarsely.

Boarding Warship Easy, Girl States

Pretty Stowaway Is Found Hiding in Engine Room.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.—If Shirley Dale, who is pretty and used to sell watches for a Flint, Mich., jewelry store, had been caught with a batch of secret blue prints tucked in her bosom, she could hardly have embarrassed the naval intelligence more.

Miss Dale, in regulation navy dungarees and a blue sweater, her long, black hair under a seaman's white cap, was discovered hiding behind the motors of the U. S. S. Long. The destroyer's motors were turning; it was ready to sail for Hawaii.

Her face smudged with grease, she was hauled before intelligence officers, who are taking wartime precautions to keep saboteurs and spies off warships.

She said she was 23 years old, and getting aboard was "easy."

"I just took a shoreboat with a bunch of sailors, ambled up the companionway past the guards and slipped into the engine room," she explained. Her plans for eating en route to Hawaii were nebulous.

As to her reasons for wanting to go to Hawaii, she said that Flint was "downright cold." She hitchhiked to California, but when she arrived, decided she might as well go on to Hawaii, where she understood it was warmer.

"I couldn't afford to pay for a ticket to Hawaii," she said, "so I decided to stow away. I thought if I got on a warship and it got far enough out to sea, it wouldn't turn back when I was found."

The officers turned her over to Gertrude Wood, San Diego municipal court probation officer.

Woman in Her 60s Pans For Gold and Finds It

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C.—Mrs. A. Jenkins, now in her 60s, but with 14 years of gold-panning and prospecting to her credit, is searching the interior of British Columbia for a fabled "lost mine."

With her husband employed as a boom watchman near Pitt Lake, Mrs. Jenkins slings a rifle and a 50-pound pack on her shoulders and trudges through the hills near by looking for gold.

She hopes to find a lode abandoned many years ago, according to legend. Until that day comes, she makes an excellent living panning placer gold. On some days she averages $8 along the Fraser river.

Mrs. Jenkins has been globe-trotting with her husband for nearly 40 years, off and on, but they recently acquired an old fishing boat and decided to settle down at Pitt Lake.

"Some people think the gold rush cleaned out the Fraser river diggings," she said, "but they forget that new gold sand is washed down every year."

Bears on Better Terms With U. S. Park Visitors

WASHINGTON. — America's national parks recorded only two "bear incidents" last summer, according to the national park service of the department of the interior.

A vigorous anti-bear feeding campaign conducted by the service was credited by park rangers with the improved relations between bears and visitors. Only too often in years past some park visitor has discovered to his dismay that the "cute cub" which ambled out to meet his car, when aroused is about the nearest thing to a "blitzkrieg" this continent has to offer.

Typical "bear incidents" cited by the rangers include such playful antics as wrecking an automobile, clawing a tent to pieces or cuffing a too familiar photographer. Bears seldom inflict personal injuries unless the visitor has been imprudent.

Youth Endures Dental Torture to Join Army

Rejected by the army because of defective teeth, he sat from 10 a. m. until 8:30 p. m. in a dentist's chair and suffered proings and pullings, drillings and fillings, until at last his molars were in order. In that ordeal, with only local anesthesia and fortified by only one cup of coffee, the hardy youth had:

Three teeth pulled.
Four filled.
Five crowns repaired.
Two removable bridges inserted.
Today he awaits another army examination.

HOME COMING

By R. H. WILKINSON

(Associated Newspapers.)
WNU Service.

WE KNEW very little about Uncle Wilbur. And by the same token we knew all about him.

You see, it was like this: Uncle Wilbur ran away when he was a boy. I believe his aspirations were along the cowboy line. His father and mother tried to find him, but were unsuccessful. Wilbur was an only child, and it broke them all up.

About a year after Wilbur went away, his father died. And six months later his mother died, too. Folks said it was from broken hearts.

It so happened that I was the nearest living relative, and by the time I had grown up and married Sally, Uncle Wilbur was only a legend. All the facts concerning his disappearance were told to me by my own mother and father, now both dead. For I was but a babe in arms when Uncle Wilbur decamped for the western plains.

It was, therefore, a surprise when one day a letter arrived from El Paso, Texas, signed by Uncle Wilbur. It was a lengthy epistle, and from its contents we learned the following facts: Uncle Wilbur had but recently learned of the death of his father and mother. Since coming West he had served in a variety of capacities: stable boy, barroom helper, cowboy, horse wrangler and a dozen others which have no bearing on his present circumstances. Some twelve years ago he had turned prospector. Suffice it to say that Uncle Wilbur had, to quote his own phraseology, "struck it rich."

He was now, we gleaned, a retired rancher, a man of no small wealth. Investigation had revealed that we were his only living relatives. In fact, he seemed to be in possession of all the facts concerning the departure of our family from this earth, and of my own dire financial circumstances.

He seemed shrunken and bent and dried up.

He expressed a desire to return to the land of his nativity, to spend his declining years with his only blood relative now existing. Delicately he touched upon the condition of our finances, the facts about which he seemed only too well aware, and advised that he was crediting to our account at the bank a sum of money, which was to be used at our discretion and for whatever purpose we saw fit. In conclusion Uncle Wilbur stated that he would arrive about the first of the following month, and trusted that his advent would not inconvenience us.

Directly following the reading of this letter I called my bank, and was staggered by the amount of money which Uncle Wilbur had credited to my balance.

For a time Sally and I were undecided. We discussed the thing from many angles and at length decided that the least we could do was to prepare a hearty welcome for the old man. His munificence had startled us. We hardly knew whether the money was to be used for our own needs, or for the purpose of preparing an elaborate homecoming.

The more we thought and talked about the proposed visit of Uncle Wilbur, the more delighted we became with the prospect. He was our only living relative, a fact which had, up to the present time, been more or less a source of annoyance. Those young married couples with whom we most associated were forever dwelling upon the achievements of their relatives, near and distant.

We therefore made haste to appraise our friends of Uncle Wilbur's planned visit, and covered our confusion nobly when asked why he had kept secret knowledge of his existence. We pictured him as a tall, powerful man; a sun-tanned and virile-looking westerner; a man of fabulous wealth, a man of distinction and bearing. We exaggerated and elaborated and secretly prayed that Uncle Wilbur would be, in appearance at any rate, everything that we had portrayed.

Sally had written to Uncle Wilbur that we would be delighted to have him visit us, to make his home with us as long as he liked. We drew unstintingly on the money he had deposited to our credit. We added a new wing to the house, which was fixed up into an attractive suite for Uncle Wilbur's own use. We remodeled the interior of our own home and purchased new furniture.

Our friends were thus convinced of Uncle Wilbur's existence. They promised to be on hand to add their welcome. They were as pleased as we with the prospect, and aided us no end in painting Uncle Wilbur as the distinguished personage we thought him to be.

A letter arrived from Uncle Wilbur a week before his expected arrival. He would, he said, be delayed because of business reasons. He thanked us for our eagerness to have him with us, and declared he was looking forward to the day when once more he would be united with the last surviving members of his family. The letter contained a check of no small amount which he directed us to feel free to use for our personal needs.

The delay gave us further time to complete preparations. Moreover, the postponement and the check served to increase our interest and form a clear mental picture of the man who, it appeared, was to become our benefactor.

For a month, we heard no further word from Uncle Wilbur. And when another week had passed we began to despair of his coming. Our friends began to talk and wonder and suggest among themselves that our Uncle Wilbur was "mythical" after all. Sally wrote again, but received no answer. And as the weeks dragged by we spoke of Uncle Wilbur less often when folks were about for fear of hearing a soft but clear snicker in some remote corner of the room.

It was nearly fall when next we heard of Uncle Wilbur. A knock sounded on our door one evening, and upon opening it I discovered there a small man with a gray beard. The beard was stained with tobacco juice. The face of him was wizened and leathery looking. His eyes were red and watery. He seemed shrunken and bent and dried up. I would have closed the door on him, had he not thrust himself inside and said he had word for us from Uncle Wilbur.

There was a dirtiness about the little man that provoked our disgust, though we listened to his tale and then sent him away.

He told us that he came from Uncle Wilbur to deliver a message, which message he presented me in rather a bulky envelope. As we talked the watery eyes of him darted about the room and I saw on his face a look which would have aroused in me a feeling of pity, had it been a less despicable countenance.

The little man departed at last, having told us but vaguely about Uncle Wilbur, confirming only the facts about him we already knew.

As soon as he had gone we opened the package and found it to contain the last will and testament of our dear old uncle. He had bequeathed us his entire fortune, which was greater than we had at first supposed. A brief note accompanied the testament, written in Uncle Wilbur's curious hand, stating that he was at death's door. He had learned, he said, of our plans for his reception and of the picture we had conjured in our minds of his personal appearance. He hoped we would carry that memory with us always.

On the day following the body of a man was recovered from the river below the mill. The man was small and bearded and dirty looking. No papers of identification were on his person, though we recognized him as our visitor of the night previous. And in memory of our distinguished uncle we saw that the poor chap had a proper burial.

And that was the last we ever heard of Uncle Wilbur.

National Forest Rangers Have Numerous Duties

Deep in primeval wilderness of Olympic National park, a National Park Service ranger makes a reading of weather recording instruments, at one of the stations scattered about the park's 835,000 acres. The information he obtains he radios back to park headquarters. This is but one of the many duties a park ranger must perform, as on horseback or afoot, he makes long and oftentimes lonely patrols of the park area.

Park rangers usually are college graduates in forestry, biology or botany; obtain their appointments through exceedingly stiff civil service examinations, and while on duty are subject to call 24 hours a day. During the forest fire danger season, the ranger carries a "smoke-chaser" pack, that includes a map, compass, first-aid kit, hand pump, fire tools and two days' emergency rations. He carries this outfit on his back while on patrols ranging from 5 to 20 miles a day.

The ranger acts as guide, counsellor and friend to visitors to the national park, while at other times his portable short-wave radio is often his only means of communication with park headquarters. He must be prepared to repair telephone lines in the wilderness, sometimes damaged by storms and falling trees. While on the trail the ranger is his own cook. Hotcakes, bacon and eggs are standard fare, rarely fresh meat or vegetables. And at night, he beds down, his horse tethered nearby, in some mountain meadow or beside a stream. He never uses his saddle for a pillow; rolled up jeans are more comfortable. But the saddle makes a good wind-break.

CHRIST REJECTED

LESSON TEXT—Luke 20:9-20.
GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.—Matthew 5:11.

Rejection of Christ by Israel as a nation is pictured in our lesson. We know how the judgment of God has come upon that nation because of its failure to receive Him and believe on Him. God had to take the vineyard from them and give it to others (v. 16).

Men today reject Christ, and we find that the sin which causes them to do so and the judgment which follows are essentially the same as in the case of Israel. There is a reason for Christ rejection, and there is a certain time of answering to God for that sin.

I. Why Men Reject Christ (vv. 9-15).

Self-will, the very heart of all sin, underlies every refusal to let Christ have His rightful control over our lives. There are two forces which may dominate and direct my life—God's will or self-will. Just as love of God is the essence of all virtue (Matt. 22:37-38), so love of self is the essence of all sin.

The leaders of Israel, both political and religious, had one great fear which dominated all of their thinking concerning Jesus; namely, that they would lose all their authority if He were recognized by the people for what the leaders must have known Him to be—the Son of God, and their rightful King. God had entrusted to them as underservants the care of His vineyard, and in their wicked greed they had determined to have it all for themselves, even though it meant destroying the Son and rightful Heir.

We need only a moment's reflection to realize that this is exactly what occurs every time someone now rejects Christ. It is because in self-will that person decides that the one who has a right to his life is not to have it. There are many sins, but this is the root sin of them all.

II. What Happens When Men Reject Christ (vv. 16-18).

Judgment. It came to Israel, as all history even to this dark day so strikingly testifies. Just so, it will come to every one who rejects Christ.

It is not a slight matter of comparative unimportance whether a man accepts or rejects Christ. He likes to make it appear so, saying that it is just something about the local church that he does not like, or the preacher does not exactly suit him; or perchance he hides behind the time-worn excuse that there are hypocrites in the church, when in doing so he proves that he is himself the worst of hypocrites.

All of these excuses do not hide the fact that in self-will he is rejecting God's will for his life in Christ. At the end of that road he will have to meet the judgment of God upon sin. God reads the heart, knows the falsity of every excuse and the real rebellion against Christ, which may be hidden from fellow men by smooth words and polite manners.

Tear off that mask, unbelieving friend who may read these words. Face the truth that you are refusing Christ's authority because you are self-willed, and look squarely at the fact that "it is appointed unto men once to die, and after this cometh the judgment" (Heb. 9:27, R. V.)

III. How Men Reject Christ (vv. 19, 20).

Deceit and treachery of the vilest kind marked the rejection of Christ by Israel's leaders. They feared the people, and lacking the authority to condemn Him themselves they had to obtain some evidence under which the Roman law would have to sentence Him. It is significant that they could not find one bit of real evidence against Him and had to proceed by trickery and treachery.

Christ rejection in our day is just as deceitful and treacherous, although it does not often appear so outwardly. As a matter of fact, the leaders of Israel were outwardly polite and careful. They sent spies who could "feign themselves to be just men." They "feared the people" and did not dare to speak openly against Him.

Men cover up their motives today. Some would wish to excuse themselves on the ground of lack of knowledge, but in our land at least that is largely their own choice. Others might say they have only been careless, but on what ground can one justify neglect of a life and death matter? Some blame the sins of professing Christians, but this is an individual matter—you must answer for your own soul.

No matter which way man may turn in seeking for an excuse for his rejection of Christ, if he is honest he will have to admit that he has dealt deceitfully with God. When he does that, he is ready in repentance and faith to take Christ as his Saviour and Lord.

THE SMOKY YEARS

By Alan Le May

Dusty King had been murdered—Dusty, who had been like a father to Bill Roper. Then Roper—who had been a respectable man—turned "outlaw" to "get even."

How Bill Roper gathered together a tougher, more desperate band of outlaws and rustlers, beat the Thorpe gang at their own game, and drove them out of the country, is told with breathless speed and with fidelity to the history of those epic times in "The Smoky Years." Don't miss it!

Sometime ago petitions were circulated and signed in Orland asking the WPA to continue the local public library project. The petitions were forwarded to Washington and the answer received has been that the matter will be given attention.

Citizens of Orland Park have been much concerned over the news that Dr. S. S. Leavitt has been notified to appear for regular army service, and petitions have been circulated the past week asking that Dr. Leavitt's call be deferred to a later date as the community is in need of his services.

Rev. Paul T. Sanders a former Orland Park minister and director of the Community Center Foundation in Palos Park has been a patient in the Hines hospital. He is improving nicely.

ORLAND ROARING TIGERS WIN

The Orland Park Roaring Tigers got back in the win column Friday night with an exciting game against the Frankfort grade school. A small crowd attended at the Tinley Park Gym. The final score stood at 20 to 14.

Leading the Roaring Tiger attack with ten points was center Willie Heim and forwards Bud Yunker and Norman Kramer were close behind. Orland Park had a small height advantage over their opponents. At the end of the first quarter the score was 4 to 2 and at the half it was 10 to 8.

The Roaring Tigers played Mokena Wednesday at Frankfort and are pointing towards the tournament at Mokena next week.

ORLAND 56, FRANKFORT 25

Orland's tall Juniors had an easy time winning from Frankfort's short and lightweight Freshmen and Sophomores. What had been expected to be a close game turned into a one-sided practice in which Orland ran up 40 points in the first half. During the second half the relaxing of the home defense and slackening of the offense added only 16 points while Frankfort matched the score except by one point. Pete Uthe and Bob Hewson were hitting everything during the first half. Even Bob Arnold took more than his usual two shots and surprised himself by adding three baskets to the total as did Norman Jorgensen. Chuck Maddox made 5 of his now famous one-handed shots.

The passing of the entire team was notably better as was the inclination to meet passes. Every member of the squad saw action as a preparation for Wednesday's game in which only part of our Juniors were allowed to play against Mokena.

This evening we're playing our return game with Manhattan on their floor.

Next week we're looking forward to taking part in Mokena's Invitation tournament.

THIS PUDDING FAIRLY SHOUTS 'TRY ME!'
(See Recipes Below)

ADD ONE CUP OF IMAGINATION

Once upon a time a friend told me that to her the addition of "one cup of imagination" was the most important ingredient that could be used in any recipe. So whole heartedly do I agree with her that today I want to give you a number of recipes to which that ingredient, imagination, has been added. In fact, so successfully has this been done that each of these recipes is different, yet each is delicious — each fairly shouts "Try me!"

These recipes, moreover, have been chosen as luncheon favorites because, of all of the meals of the day, the family luncheon some way seems to be most neglected.

Take the baked apricot and tapioca pudding for example; have you ever before thought of serving a coffee sauce with such a pudding? Yet the blend of flavors which results from combining this particular pudding with this particular sauce is really delicious — long to be remembered.

Sausage Stand-Up. (Serves 4 to 6)

- 1 8-ounce package spaghetti (broken small)
- 1 pound breakfast sausages
- ¾ cup minced onion
- 1 clove garlic (minced)
- 4 tablespoons parsley (finely chopped)
- 1 can tomato paste (6-ounce)
- 1 cup water
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ½ teaspoon sugar
- ¾ cup grated cheese

Cook broken spaghetti in boiling water (6 cups) (1 teaspoon salt per quart water) until tender, about 20 minutes, then drain. Place sausages in skillet, add ¼ cup of water and cook until nicely browned, about 15 minutes. Sauté onion, garlic, and parsley in sausage fat for 5 minutes, until onions are yellow and transparent. Remove from fat and combine with tomato paste and seasonings. Combine spaghetti with tomato sauce and turn into buttered casserole. Tuck sausages into spaghetti in upright position, so that just the end of each sausage shows. Sprinkle grated cheese over top and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for 20 minutes.

Baked Apricot and Tapioca Pudding (Serves 6 to 8)

- ½ cup pearl tapioca
- ½ cup evaporated apricots or 2 cups canned apricots
- ½ cup sugar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 3 cups warm water
- 1 tablespoon butter

Soak pearl tapioca in cold water, to cover, for one hour. Wash apricots and place in a well-greased 1½-quart heat-resistant glass casserole. Add sugar, salt, lemon juice and warm water. Drain tapioca; stir it into the fruit mixture in casserole and dot with bits of butter. Cover the dish and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for 1 hour or until the tapioca parts are translucent. Cool, top with whipped cream, if desired, and serve with coffee sauce.

Coffee Sauce.

- ½ cup sugar
- 1½ tablespoons cornstarch
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup hot coffee, regular strength
- 2 tablespoons butter
- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg, if desired

Blend sugar, cornstarch and salt in the upper part of a 1-quart heat-resistant glass double boiler. Add coffee and cook until it thickens, stirring constantly. Blend in butter and nutmeg. Cool and serve with apricot and tapioca pudding.

Hot Dogs in Blankets.

When baking fresh yeast rolls, wrap strips of the dough around wieners, allowing the ends to stick out of their dough blanket. Give the dough time to double in bulk and bake as usual. These hot dogs in blankets should be served piping hot.

My Style Spaghetti. (Serves 5 to 6)

- ½ cup olive oil
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 1 green pepper, seeded and chopped
- 1 pound ground beef
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- 1 cup tomato puree
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- ½ cup grated cheese
- 1 cup canned corn
- ½ package spaghetti, cooked

Heat olive oil in frying pan and add onion, green pepper and ground beef. Fry until brown and then add the salt, tomato puree, and Worcestershire sauce. Stir in the grated cheese together with the corn and cooked spaghetti. Place in buttered baking casserole and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for approximately 40 minutes.

Honey All-Bran Spice Cookies. (Makes 2½ dozen cookies)

- ¾ cup shortening
- ½ cup honey
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 cup All-Bran
- 1½ cups flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon soda
- ½ teaspoon cloves
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 cup seedless raisins

Blend shortening, sugar and honey thoroughly. Add egg and beat until creamy. Add bran. Sift flour once before measuring. Add salt, baking powder, soda, cloves and cinnamon. Combine with raisins. Add to first mixture and beat well. Drop dough by teaspoons on lightly greased baking sheet about 2½ inches apart. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) about 12 to 15 minutes.

Cheese Soup With Rice (Serves 5)

- 1 cup cooked carrot (very finely diced)
- 4 cups milk
- 1 tablespoon chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 cup grated cheese
- 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
- 2 egg yolks
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon white pepper
- ½ cup rice (cooked)

Add carrot and onion to milk and scald. Melt butter in saucepan, add flour and blend to a smooth paste. Add milk gradually to flour mixture, stirring all the time. Add cheese, salt and pepper, stirring until cheese is melted. Pour over well-beaten egg yolks, stirring constantly. Serve at once with spoonful of hot cooked rice.

Mexican Spaghetti. (Serves 8 to 10)

- ½ pound spaghetti
- 1 can peas (No. 2)
- ½ pound raw ham (ground)
- ½ pound American cheese (grated)
- 1 can tomatoes (No. 2)
- ½ cup green pepper (cut fine)
- 1 tablespoon pimiento (cut fine)
- 2 tablespoons butter (melted)
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- Bacon strips

Cook the spaghetti in boiling, salted water. Drain. In a baking dish arrange layers of spaghetti, peas, ground ham and cheese and combine tomatoes, green pepper, pimiento, butter, and seasonings. Pour over the spaghetti. Cover with grated cheese and top with bacon strips. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for one hour.

Refrigerator Hamburgers. (Serves 5)

- 1 pound hamburger
- 2 tablespoons finely minced onion
- ¼ cup chopped green pepper
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon prepared mustard
- 1 tablespoon horseradish

Mix all ingredients together, and shape into a roll 2½ inches in diameter. Let stand in the refrigerator several hours or over night. When ready to use, cut in slices ¾ inches thick and fry or broil as for regular hamburgers.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM PRIVATE TURKEY

Dear Mom:

The cake and things you sent arrived okay only I did not get none on account of my buddies opened them. The trouble with the army is that you can't keep a separate mailing address. Well, everything is going along good and life in the army ain't so bad once you make up your mind it can't be any too good.

We have movies here but no screen, so you would not like army life, mom. We have hostesses here, too. I thought a hostess was somebody you found in airplanes, but in the camps a hostess is a lady who has charge of the entertainment side of life and I think we may even get rumba lessons in this war. There are quite a few hostesses here, but do not worry about me, Mom, as they are all pretty old, some even as old as 38 and 40. I don't know who is picking them, but it ain't Billy Rose.

At first I thought the Camp Fire Girls were being drafted, too, but I found out the government wants the soldiers to have as much amusement as they can get in the next war, including double features, swing music and Mickey Mouse. They even have cafeteria lunch-rooms for visitors so if an outsider gets poisoned they can't blame it on the regular army cook.

More rifles are arriving and I guess maybe by the time war comes almost every soldier will have a gun.

Do not keep sending me heavy underwear as you have my tent full of it already.

Love,
Oscar.

Dear Mom:

I am getting so I do not mind being here at all and my morale would be good except I didn't keep getting newspapers and reading the news from Washington. I have got around to the point where I am used to taking orders and to facing a war if there is no way out, but what is all this stuff about going to the aid of China, Greece and all nations everywhere?

In one breath I am told I will not be sent out of the United States and in the next I hear all countries in trouble anywhere can depend on help from me, and if all this is so, I keep asking myself why I didn't join the navy to see the world, which I may have to see anyhow.

What is all this lease-lend stuff, and do I go with the lease? Also could you send me some newspaper article explaining what is being lended. I hope no tanks are being lended as we are still using ice wagons here. If we must lend something let us lend first sergeants as there are too many of 'em around this camp.

The food here could be better. I haven't had a good juicy steak yet. Are they lending them to somebody, too?

Well, do not worry, as I am getting used to everything and am very happy today because I learned Otto Bixby, who was my boss at the store, has been drafted, too, and will be here, too, any day now.

Love,
Oscar.

Dear Mom:

Bixby, my old boss (who was such a stinker), just arrived and is in my company. I am going to work hard now to be a sergeant, or at least a corporal. I will write more later.

Love,
Oscar.

PATTERNS

SEWING CIRCLE

8876

THERE'S something guileless and appealing about a yoke dress like this that will make you look as fresh and bright as a little girl all dressed up in a new starched frock! It's very becoming and youthifying to misses and women alike. Yet design No. 8876 offers you the makings of a very comfortable home style, with waistline that you can comfortably draw in to just the slimmest you want, by means of the sash belt in the back.

The high-cut skirt is very slenderizing to the hips and waist. The gathered bodice gives you a nice round bosom-line. Make this of percale, calico or gingham and trim with bright ricrac and buttons. Untrimmed, it's a good style for runabout, if you make it up in flat crepe or spun rayon. Send for the pattern today, and be among the first to wear it!

Pattern No. 8876 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 and 40. Size 14 requires 3¾ yards of 36-inch material without nap; 1½ yards trimming. Detailed sew chart included. Send order to:

Beginner Didn't Want Possibility to Be Wasted

The instructor was teaching the awkward fellow to drive a car. "Put out your left hand to signal. Then with your left foot step in the clutch. With your right hand put the gearshift into first. Gradually ease up on the clutch, accelerating with your right foot."

"When the car has gathered speed, again step in the clutch, shifting with the right hand to second. Then with the left foot slowly let out the clutch, accelerating with the right foot. Then repeat to shift to high speed. Keep your eyes on the road ahead."

"There's nothing useful I could do with my nose, is there?" inquired the beginner.

NAGGING BACKACHE

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action. Don't Neglect It!

Modern life with its ceaseless hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking, exposure, contagion, whatnot, keeps doctors busy, hospitals crowded. The after effects are disturbing to the kidneys and oftentimes people suffer without knowing that disordered kidney action may cause the trouble. After colds, fever and similar ills there is an increase of body impurities the kidneys must filter from the blood. If the kidneys are overtaxed and fail to remove excess acid and other harmful waste, there is poisoning of the whole system.

THE REASON DOAN'S ARE FAMOUS
All over the country grateful people tell others: "Doan's have helped me! I recommend them to you." That is why we say, Ask your neighbor!

Symptoms of disturbed kidney function may be nagging backache, persistent headache, dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of strength and energy. Other signs of kidney or bladder disturbance sometimes are burning, scanty or too frequent urination. In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide approval than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. They have been winning new friends for more than forty years. Be sure to get Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

If You Read in Bed You'll Want This Bag

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THIS bag was planned as a hospital gift for someone who was finding days in bed difficult enough without having books, magazines, writing materials and spectacle case scattered about and forever getting lost. If you like to take an assortment of reading matter to bed, sick or well, you will enjoy a bag like this. Its hanger hook may be sewed to box springs and there you are with everything at hand.

The bag shown here was made of a remnant of heavy cotton upholstery material in tones of green with a touch of red in the pattern. The red was repeated in the sateen lining. The sketch gives all the dimensions and shows how the lining and the outside part were made. A coat hanger was cut down to measure 12 inches from end to end and was placed between the lining and the outside; these being stitched together around the top, as illustrated.

NOTE: As a service to our readers Mrs. Spears has prepared a series of six booklets of her original ideas. Each booklet contains 32 home-making projects with illustrated directions. Booklets are numbered from 1 to 6, numbers 3 and 4 containing directions for other types of bags and door pockets that will make house-keeping easier. Booklets are 10c each and may be ordered direct from:
